

SMAS Accreditation

Our sister company, SMAS (short for Safety Management Advisory Services), is a nationally recognised Health & Safety accreditation used to demonstrate your business' Health & Safety standards, giving main contractors confidence when it comes to your competence.

By achieving SMAS accreditation, you can easily establish that you're a safe business to team up with, which gives you a real competitive edge when it comes to submitting tenders and/or pre-qualification questionnaires (PQQs) – and saves you time in doing so, too.

Recommended Services

SMAS Worksafe is a registered member of Safety Schemes in Procurement (SSIP), which is endorsed by the Health and Safety Executive.

By becoming SMAS accredited, you'll get:

- Accreditation in as little as three days*
- Help through the entire application process – from start to finish
- An assigned assessor to help you for 30 days, available during working hours.
- An interactive application that only asks questions that are relevant to you
- Visibility to 45+ key construction buyers through the SMAS Contractor Portal
- Exclusive access to Meet the Buyer events and new tender opportunities
- Access to a smart application process, which uses up to 40% of your information on renewal – saving you time and resource
- Market-wide acknowledgement that you've got safe systems of work in place.

Why SMAS?

- They provide over-the-phone advice to guide you through the entire application process.
- They can help you to answer any questions and provide supporting content.
- They give early notification before renewal, so that your accreditation never goes out of date.
- They can upload evidence – like policies, handbooks and risk assessments – into the SMAS portal for you†.
- They can give you access to more than 1,000 example risk assessments and method statements, and an ever-growing list of training modules†.
